

Evidence Discussion

Intradiscal Procedure

Percutaneous intradiscal procedures include thermal/chemical/mechanical decompression, electrothermal therapy, as well as injection of chemical and biomaterial. Risks of intradiscal procedures are discitis, nerve root injury, dural puncture, vitreoretinal hemorrhage, pneumocephalus headache and vertebrobasilar stroke. (1)

References

1. Migliore A, Sorbino A, Bacciu S, Bellelli A, Frediani B, Tormenta S, Pirri C, Foti C. The Technique of Intradiscal Injection: A Narrative Review. Ther Clin Risk Manag. 2020; 16: 953–968.